Leveraged Information Assurance

You're not in business to keep information secure, but without information security, you can't stay in business. Issues like regulatory compliance, application security, software patching, spam, and malware bombard managers of information systems. Even in organizations where there is dedicated security staff, their effectiveness depends on getting adequate training, collaboration, and support.

You don't need to build and support a full-fledged Information Assurance program to meet your objectives—Interhack has already built one that you can leverage to augment your own organization's capability. We fit your needs, organizational structure, and budget—providing whatever is needed from the front-line security practitioner up through forensic computer scientists who can provide expert testimony for criminal prosecution and civil litigation.

Information Security to Support Your Mission

The first step in your information assurance program is having Interhack's experts meet with your business experts. We start with your organization's mission and then look at your organization's internal capabilities, helping you to see what makes sense to do yourself and what is best handled by a partner you can trust.

Understanding your business requirements, we develop a plan that will meet present needs and allow future needs to be addressed. We work with you to develop a monthly service and payment schedule, providing you the right balance of utility and expense, while normalizing your expenditures and stabilizing your cash flow.

Interhack assigns an INFOSEC officer to your organization, allowing relationships to build, providing a consistent and stable connection between your organization and ours. Through our regular interaction, your organization's information assurance program makes steady progress in closing the gap between what you expect your systems to do and what actually happens. When problems arise, they don't turn into disasters; they're simply identified and handled. With Interhack behind you, you don't need to worry about getting in over your head.

The end result is that your organization is better able to stay focused on its mission, instead of fighting fires. Contact us to see how we can put Leveraged Information Assurance to work for you.

Why Interhack?

Quite simply, because the expertise you get with Interhack cannot be found elsewhere. Interhack's work has been cited in formal legal and computer science literature, university courses throughout the world, cutting-edge technology law, and U.S. government recommendations in computer security. There is no need to go to second-hand sources; Interhack's Leveraged Information Assurance makes the original available to you—easily and affordably.
